Kelli has over 20 years of experience in the investment industry, working her way up through the ranks to where she is now as a Financial Advisor and owner of KL Wealth Strategies. She works with her clients toward their short-term and long-term financial goals using both taxable and qualified accounts and a variety of investment vehicles.

Kelli believes that all parties in a divorce should come out with an equitable distribution and explaining the difference between equal and equitable is just the beginning of the conversation. As a financial advisor Kelli has met with many clients who were thrown off track financially due to a divorce. Seeing this happen too many times is what drove her to become a Certified Divorce Financial Analyst. In this capacity she can closely examine the financial situation you are in and show you, as a financial neutral, the various outcomes of your settlement. Regardless of your situation, careful preparation not only helps with the financial and emotional stress now, but also for the long term.
